Description

The Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of the National Register of Health Service Psychologists serves as its leader, representative, and spokesperson. The CEO leads the National Register in fulfilling its mission to credential health service psychologists, executing the National Register's strategic plan and positioning the organization programmatically as the professional home for health service psychologists. In addition, the CEO promotes credentialed health service psychologists to consumers, provides distinction and value to health service psychologists, guides psychology students and early career psychologists (ECPs) toward credentialing, enhances health service psychologists' contributions to integrated healthcare, and identifies qualified health service psychologists in the global community. The CEO represents and supports the 15,000 credentialed Health Service Psychologists and Associate members of the organization and reports to the NR's Board of Directors.

The CEO is a visionary who embraces change, understands and seeks out new technologies, communicates with different audiences, and understands the political and economic dimensions of the healthcare industry. The successful applicant will have a history of working with diverse populations and a demonstrated commitment to improving inclusivity in the field.

The CEO oversees management of the organization, including administration, finances, and personnel. The CEO serves as the Editor-in-Chief of the Association's peer-reviewed journal, the Journal of Health Service Psychology, and oversees all other publications of the Association. The position requires someone who likes to solve problems, implement solutions, work with decision-makers, build coalitions, and nurture and leverage a growing network of strategic partnerships.
